With this statement, a famous writer has disclosed his great favorite cartoon character which is based on a real life person or even a real life person himself. In all our life we are bound to meet many people. By name, sex, race, job, location, habits and so on. Through them, we may be familiar with each other and we also may have some interesting story to share. Listed below are some funny and interesting stories of famous people's worst enemies. In the story, we are made aware of their peculiar hobbies and friends. The best part is that their "worst enemies" are not in the bad way and they are not even bad people. To understand them and their hobbies, let's start with the list. Listed below are the famous people with their "Worst Enemies": James Bond The James Bond franchise is primarily about a British spy who uses his wits and his charm to defeat criminals and terrorists. But behind the glamour, there's a man named Ian Fleming who wrote the 007 books. Fleming loved dogs and owned several of them, including Queen, a lurcher. He once described to a friend, "If the bitch (i.e. female dog) doesn't walk out when you call her, then you call the man (i.e. male dog)." Jackie Collins Although Jack the Librarian has been a common fantasy character in novels for many years
