Proxy Switch, a free of charge download, will allow you to access certain web sites from your computer by bypassing your ISP's proxy server. This works by binding to port 80, the port used by your web browser, to redirect all your web requests to your local proxy server instead. This is done, since your internet service provider might be acting as a firewall or content filter for certain web sites. In order to use the program, all you need is to install it and double-click on Proxy Switch. This will launch a graphical interface where all the proxy settings are listed. To see which IP address you will use, simply click on the drop-down menu at the bottom of the window and pick the one from your local network. Next, you will be asked to enter the username and password. Enter in the required info and press "Connect". After the web site is successfully loaded, uncheck the box that says "Keep my cookies". To exit, simply click on the "X" button. You should note that some web sites that you are trying to access will not be available. The program does not recognize sites that use proxy servers to hide the IP addresses of users and the ones that are listed are detected by the software. It is specially designed to support web browsers that use Virtual Private Networks (VPN) like Tor and HTTPS as the proxy. If you are using it as a VPN, you will have to set the program as the proxy server using the configuration utility that comes with the program. It's simply a matter of making sure that the proxy is set to "DIRECT" and entering the proxy password. The proxy can be local, meaning your computer, or a remote one, meaning a different computer or a router in your network. Once set as the proxy server, you will be asked to enter the username and password associated with the account that you are currently using. If you are using Tor as the proxy server, the proxy server field will disappear and only your IP address will remain. In this case, you will have to set that field to your local IP address.
