I knew I had to do something to prepare. I was very nervous and uncomfortable. I felt like I had stepped into a jungle. It was a feeling of being in my own private jail. I was completely imprisoned. After a few minutes, it became easier to let go of my body. I could feel my energy flowing through my body, my soul, and my mind. I was guided to my room so that I could be with the young child who had lost her husband and her husband's sister. She was so young, and she had lost her father. It was really amazing to be with her. I was given a story to read and was guided to write and think about the lessons of that story. I was allowed to channel the lessons as I was thinking about the story. One of the pieces of wisdom that came through was about how important it is to slow down and to value the small things in life. When I thought of the little things in my life that I did enjoy, it seemed like everything was going great. I took a little time to really think about it and to be grateful for everything that I did have. Then I started to take a look at all of the things that were outside of my life that could be of value, and that I could contribute to. I am reminded that things like being with family, friends and pets, giving to a charity, or meditation are all things that can add to my life. There is a
